Pine Chair, after reading the letter, asked Mr. Brinkley, who was present, to address the Board.

Mr. Brinkley said that a few words of explanation in regard to the card lately published by him, and the apparent discrepancy be ween it and Capt. Mahan's recent statements. When in New York last summer, said Mr. Brinkley, he met certain parties who were heavy owners of certain parties who were heavy owners of the Little Rock stock; in a conversation in regard to it, he suggested as a means of enhancing its value, and as a step to-wards the completion of the road, that they should purchase the stock held by the cite of Membia. They then author-Inis offer he made to the city through his son, then in the city, but it was declined. When he came home he renewed it, and it was still refused. He had learned recently, since the publication of his card, from Mr. Tainter, he is authorized to offer $100,000 for the same stock, by the same parties. In his card he simply meant to say that he was not an agent of anybody, and had never received authority from these or any other parties to make any such offer as that of Capt. Mahan. He had received information, however, from Capt. Mahan, Mr. Tainter and otherwise, which led him to believe that Capt. Mahan represented the same parties that he did. While he the same parties that he did. While he had nothing to retract from his card, and he believed that Mr. Tainter was an honorable man, and that he and Capt. Mahan were the hone fide agents of these same parties, he would suggest in order to save the diy's interests that the Board appoint some reliable citizen—some one in whom the public had confidence, to go to New York and make the sale of this stock to these parties. They have already a deep

York and make the sale of this stock to these parties. They have already a deep interest in the road, being owners of the first mortgage bonds, and can have no interests antagonistic to Memphis. If the city had the ability to complete the road, or was able to hold her stock he would advise her to sell to nobody. He had always opposed the sale of the stock, and only selvecated it now as a necessity. As to the offer of Mr. Tainter or Capt. Mahan, he believed that it was a good one, and did not think the city could do any better. From what he knew of the gentlemen who wished to knew of the gentlemen who wished to purchase, he could say they were not speculators, and had no interests not those of Memphis. He thought to make the slock in the road worth anything, it must be completed, and he would not advise the sale of the city's interest in it, except on a guarantee that the road would be built within a cersin time.

Judge Swayne asked if the completion of the road depended upon the sale of the

Mr. Brinkley did not think so, but he Mr. Brinkley did not think so, but he did believe that those gentlemen who were bidding for it could be done if the stock sooner than it could be done if the stock was not sold to them. Mr. Brinkley remarked further that he and Mr. Mahan had talked freely and freshold. and Mr. Mahan had talked freely and fre-quently, and he believed that he (Mahan) was the agent of the very same parties as was the agent of the very same parties as he (the speaker) was. One name, especially, he racognized as the same—that of David Bow. He could not see what doubts there could be about the intention of these gentlemen. They could have no interests antagonistic to Memphis. As to the sale of the sock after they not resession of it. to outlies who were got possession of it, to parties who were so, why, all human beings were subject to empidity but he did not think that anybody could bid any more for it than citizens of Memphis.

Alderman Morfel saked whether the polding of her stock by the why hadered nolding of her stock by the city hindered other stockholders from selling? Mr. Brinkley said certainly not. Alderman Dyerashed if the city's stock, 572 shares, did not control the road? The answer was that it did.
